Taking fall portraits.

Look for walking trails and tall trees.

Distant paths give photos more interest and depth. Place your subjects at the bottom of the frame to show the height of the trees.

Eye-level with the little ones.

They move really fast, for sure. So get right down on the ground with them to capture all the fun their having with those leaves.

Fresh air.

We all know how kids love running and playing outside in the cool fall air. These candid moments can make special photos.

Interact with the environment.

Stand among the forest. Let the trees become an important part of your photo. I love the white birch in the background.
